

DECLARATION

Copying, Scanning and Photographing

The reproduction of archival material is only permissible if the material is in the public domain. The reproduction of restricted archival material requires the permission of the archive (§11 of the Terms of Use of the Archives of the Max Planck Society).

Protection of Personal Data

When using documents containing personal data, the interests worthy of protection of those involved shall be observed in accordance with the periods of protection defined in §9 of the Statute for the Archives of the Max Planck Society, and information from the personal sphere of life of individual natural persons that has only become known through the use of such documents shall not be used or only be used in anonymized form. The personality rights of those involved or of third parties shall be safeguarded. It shall not be permitted to use the documents made available in a distorting or discriminating way.

Copyright Notice

Pursuant to §§ 53, 60c of the German Copyright Law (Urheberrechtsgesetz - UrhG) it is merely permissible to make single copies of protected works for private use or for personal scientific use if such reproduction does not serve commercial purposes. It is not permissible to pass such reproductions on to third parties. The copyright does not expire until 70 years after the death(s) of the author(s).

It is not permissible to reproduce complete books or magazines; this is only permitted for small parts or single magazine articles.

If any rights of use or other rights are to be clarified, the undersigned shall have to obtain the corresponding rights him or herself.

The undersigned shall be responsible for compliance with the provisions of the Copyright Law (UrhG) and other legal regulations and shall be liable for any abuse.

Liability Notice and Applicable Law

The Archive shall neither be liable for the violation of personality rights nor for the violation of rights of third parties by the Undersigned.

German law shall apply.

The above mentioned conditions are accepted.
